I am running Thunderbird 15 on the desktop, but am having problems with the active connections always showing off. It looks like it is filling up the window with my recent contacts (that is, the ones who actually use it, plus the contacts I send to from other browsers). I would like to find a way to have the window always on so that I can see my recent contacts when I am on a desktop computer rather than having to minimize it to make room for new messages. How do I do this? (I am running Ubuntu 16.04.1 LTS if that helps.) A: You can use the following script to determine what network adapter is being used:

#!/bin/sh r = wmic nic get adapterdescription ADAPTER=`echo $r | awk '{if ($1 == "Wireless LAN Controller" || $1 == "Wireless LAN Adapter" || $1 ==
