What's New in the FileTap?

FileTap is a simple and easy-to-use software, accessible from the Command Line, that is able to transfers files from one system to another. Now you can send your the files you want to your friends in no time at all with the help of this tool. All you have to know is the IP address of the system you want to send the data to. With just a few clicks, you'll be able to transfer files, images and archives to your buddies. YOU CAN ALSO CHECK OUT MY OTHER TRICKS: *****

***** However, if the file system/protocols were designed with transferring files over long distances and slow transfer rates in mind, like we are used to on local storage devices, the chances of loss become a bit too high as if the file is somewhere along the line on the receiving system - all we have left to attempt is to try to recover the file with its data. This is where *file tap* steps in. With the recent evolution of Wi-Fi technology, we've been given the ability to transmit files via Wi-Fi. With the help of this program, you will be able to view available Wi-Fi spots to create hotspot or connect directly to the computer via Ethernet. In addition, the program can send a specific file to a specific device via your local Wi-Fi. Just type the file name and the IP address, and that's all you have to know. You can also find out the available network details and bandwidth of your home network, available to you at the risk of losing your internet connection. For those who do not know, there are a couple of ways to transfer files, let's see them below:

File Transfer Example #1: Let's say we want to send this file to our PC, you would type the following: `$ sh curl.sh -s` So we will use `curl.sh` to send files via http protocol. The `"-s"` flag will tell the program to use the server-side transfer, which is intended for HTTP headers and content.

File Transfer Example #2: Let's say we want to upload the file `css.css` to our computer
