That is one of the links for same software. A: Glad to hear about your success. I'm not surprised you got the software from torrent sites. A site I used a while ago would take a few minutes to pay out and have the software available for download. When I first joined the site you had to be a member of the site before being accepted for payment so I was quickly taken care of. The site was legit because you got the product you were after and then did a lot of online research on the softwaer to see if it was what you wanted. It was a great feeling to know the site was a legit company and not some random person looking to make a quick buck. If you ever have problems with a product on a site, I would recommend looking for a user review before wasting your time as all they have is an opinion. Pay what you want download sites are fine, but I try to avoid them if possible. I was in your situation though so I understand where you were coming from. Q: Synchronization c# for database operations I have a requirement to load data from two tables into a single table. All my data has been loaded into the corresponding table. I need to download this data from two tables and load them into a single table. How can I perform a synchronized access to the database? Is there any way? A: You can lock and unlock the data in a BackgroundWorker. However, this will have no benefit if the two different processes cannot synchronize access to the database. You should study briefly on the architecture of the database. What happens if the two processes don't execute simultaneously? If you can guarantee that the two processes won't run at the same time, you can use the synchronization provided by the database itself. Look at SyncProvider in connection string in the connection string. You can use this to sync two clients to the database. Q: React-Dropzone- 0.10.0 bug I'm using react-dropzone from and it works fine, except, when I upload files, it removes the files from the dropzone on the server-side. I've done some research and even tried the upgrade (which wasn't successful, the same), and I tried to make the api call everytime the uploadProgress changes, 1cdb36666d
