He recently called on the UN to kick out 35 member states, nine of them in Africa. On Wednesday he called the criminal justice system a "disaster", adding that it is "slow, expensive and full of bias". It seems that he still doesn't understand how the criminal justice system works. You would expect a guy like him to have knowledge of the topic. But this is something the man does not actually understand. It is as well-known fact as the law of gravity and in some circles it is a key tenet of the science of criminology. But every time we speak to him, he appears to doubt it. In a news conference in February, he said: "When law enforcement has to spend as much time and as much money and so much energy dealing with legal proceedings as it does in going after 6d1f23a050
